CONFLICTS OF INTERESTS POLICY

It is EM&I policy that actual or potential conflicts of interests are sought out at all levels in the organisation and steps taken to manage such conflicts so that they do not affect our Code of Ethics.

Each Director and employee is required to agree and observe a Conflicts of Interests clause in their contracts of employment.

Agreements with EM&I contractors and partners must likewise include a clause which has the effect of managing such conflicts so that they do not affect our Code of Ethics

The purpose of the Conflicts of Interests Policy is typically to avoid situations where:-

A Director, employee, contractor or partner must not have an interest in or be connected directly or indirectly with any activity or interest that will affect their ability to observe the EM&I Code of Ethics.

Typical examples of situations that must be recorded and managed are:

- The holding of shares or any direct or indirect interest or benefit with a competitor, client or supplier to EM&I
- Carrying out any EM&I business with, or employing a member of ones family in an EM&I business
- Individuals direct or indirect involvement with the design, manufacture, installation, operation or other similar activity of items subject to inspection, test, monitor, repair or maintenance by EM&I
- Providing goods, materials or services directly or indirectly to EM&I

Such situations must be declared by the individual, recorded on their personnel file and evaluated by the CEO or his delegated representative before deciding on what action needs be taken.

Actions can include, agreeing with the employee how to control and monitor the situation, requiring the employee to change the situation or in recurring or extreme cases, termination of the employment of the individual concerned.

GIFTS BRIBES AND INDUCEMENTS POLICY

It is EM&I Policy that employees should refuse to accept inducements of any kind. Our impartiality is a major factor in maintaining our high standing and reputation when securing contracts.

The acceptance of a major gift under any circumstances will be regarded as an act of gross misconduct and subject to instant dismissal as defined in the Company's disciplinary code and the matter will be referred to the Company's Lawyers and the police.

It is difficult to draw up clearly defined rules when the giving of gifts, particularly at Christmas, by so many firms is common practice. However, the Company's policy, which is vital to our business and the well being of employees, is as follows:

It is contrary to Company policy for staff, managers and executives at any level to accept gifts or inducements of significant value from Companies they deal with in the normal course of their duties.

Minor Gifts - Minor gifts or presents may be accepted but only after agreement with the employees' Line Manager. Minor gifts are defined, for example as stationery, calendars, a single bottle of wine or spirits, soft drinks or fortified wines.

This is not an exhaustive list, and the employee should consult their Line Manager if in doubt.

Major Gifts - These will either be returned by the Company or given to a local charity, the sender being informed in the kindest and most polite way possible of our policy and course of action. Staff, Managers or Executives who are found to have deliberately accepted and not declared gifts considered by the Company to be major in value as outlined above, will be guilty of gross industrial misconduct for which the penalty will be dismissal.

ANTI-CORRUPTION POLICY

It is EM&I policy to conduct our business in a lawful manner which is consistent with the highest ethical standards in our industry.

EM&I's Directors, employees, contractors and partners will not directly or indirectly:-

Make or offer any inducements or unwarranted or unearned benefits where this would unethically influence the benefits to EM&I, its Directors, its employees or its contractors or be contrary to the laws of the country in which work was contracted or being offered or contrary to the contractual terms agreed with a third party.

EM&I recognises that friendly relationships will develop between its personnel and other individuals that may be misconstrued as having an undue influence on EM&I's Code of Ethics. This situation will be managed by the individual concerned making a declaration of such a relationship and the Company keeping a record of such declarations so that any interested parties may observe that the relationship complies with EM&I's Code of Ethics.

We will promote our own capabilities and the benefits of the services and products we offer rather than denigrate our competitors' offerings.

If we are required to make comparisons of the benefits of our services or products with respect to other competitive methods we will do so fairly and with supporting evidence

Promotional literature and information will be reviewed by a Director of EM&I (Maritime) Ltd to comply with this policy

Monitoring

The Code of Ethics will be monitored by audits of the Quality, HR, Technical and Finance management systems and through any reports of violations.

Review

The Code of Ethics Management System will be reviewed 12 Monthly by the COO as indicated on the front page of this Management System Document.
